About the World Water day

World Water Day dates back to the 1992 United Nations (UN) Conference on Environment and Development where an international observance for water was recommended. The United Nations General Assembly designated 22 March, 1993 as the first World Water Day. It is held annually since then. The occasion of World Water Day is used to highlight the importance of supply of fresh and pure water to the mankind at affordable cost.

About Pillai College of Engineering

Pillai College of Engineering is a leading Engineering College in Navi Mumbai. It is approved by AICTE, accredited by NBA and affiliated to University of Mumbai. The Institute offers both undergraduate and postgraduate programs in Mechanical, Automobile, Electronics, Computer, Electronics and Telecommunications Engineering and Information Technology. Institute is actively involved in research in several different areas of engineering and regularly receives grants from funding agencies like Department of Science and Technology, Board of Research in Nuclear Sciences, All India Council for Technical Education etc. In addition to above, the institute has recently completed an International project entitled "Urban Expansion Observatory" in collaboration with New York University/ United Nations Organization. During last 5 years, total funding received from various agencies is about Rs 2.6 crore. Faculty members of the institute provide consultancy to the private industry also. Institute web site is www.pce.ac.in

About Indian Desalination Association

Indian Desalination Association (InDA) was formed in 1991. As India's leading organisation, it is dedicated to advancement of water technologies such as desalination, water treatment and other solute-solvent separations. InDA is affiliated to International Desalination Association (IDA) and Asia Pacific Desalination Association (APDA). It has more than 500 life members and corporate members representing all the stakeholders. Website: www.indaindia.org.in

About the Seminar

Water is an essential resource of life on earth and humans rely on finite supplies of fresh and pure water to stay alive. Contamination and poisoning of large water bodies by Chemical, Biological, Radiological and Nuclear (CBRN) agents is a potential threat. With the country poised for rapid growth, it is imperative that a suitable strategy is in place for the provision of adequate quantities of fresh water to meet the requirements of the industrial, domestic and agricultural sectors, besides ensuring the availability of safe drinking water to all. This seminar will deal with all aspects of water such as desalination of sea water, ground water reservoirs and rain water harvesting. The various techniques for purification of water and determining the purity of water will also be discussed. IT in water management as well as instrumentation and control aspects will also be covered.

The seminar would consist of scientific sessions that will include invited lectures, presentation of contributory papers and posters. The speakers will be from industry, academic institutes and those involved in social work.
